

On the beach and in the sea

Donkey rides at Rhyl, one hundred years ago.

Children have always had fun playing on the beach. Long ago they used spades and metal buckets to make sandcastles. Today buckets and spades are made from plastic.

For more than a hundred years children have watched Punch and Judy shows and enjoyed donkey rides on the beach. Sometimes you can still find these at the seaside today.

People enjoying the sea and the beach today.

Most Victorian children could not swim. They paddled in the sea. Now most children have fun swimming in the sea and playing in the waves. People also like surfing, windsurfing, and boating.
